this paper presents results of a small survey of tractor owner operators conducted in kaduna and nasarawa states in nigeria following are the key findings from simple descriptive statistics 1 owner operators who buy tractors from the private market or from private individuals are more efficient than those who receive tractors through government programs providing services to a greater area at lower costs including during the off peak season 2 providing access to a wider range of tractor horsepower may improve efficiency over diverse soil types 3 similar to some asian countries in the 1980s tractor operations are mostly concentrated in interviewees local home districts though a fraction form groups and serve in distant locations to earn greater revenues includes a yearly issue for annual road builder this paper characterizes the network of tractor service providers in ghana using the case of ejura sekye dumase district this research examines the implications of the adoption of mechanical technology in agriculture for farmers and institutions based on perspectives that go beyond the suppliers and users of mechanization services alone the results suggest that in addition to rising population density and favorable access to local and regional markets the current pattern of use of tractors by farmers in ejura district emerged from favorable historical and institutional factors the current arrangement involving a network of private tractor owners providing tractor hire services to a broad set of farmers draws upon the legacy of an earlier institutional intervention and is sustained organizationally through kinship and other existing social relationships within and outside the district moreover the expansion of tractor use has created a set of new roles and relationships within the network participation in the network is affected by various factors including farmers access to capital and knowledge experience and contacts this privately operated network is significantly more efficient and provides small scale farmers with considerably better access to plowing service than did previous government managed systems further development of the tractor service sector is likely to improve the quality of mechanization offered to smallholder farmers enhance bargaining power for farmers seeking such services and reduce structural weaknesses within the network market liberalization in myanmar began in 1988 and had some unanticipated consequences as farmers began to operate in a context with greatly reduced government control there was an explosion in the production of green gram which became extremely popular as an export crop however market liberalization in the industry surrounding this new export oriented crop gave rise to growing economic disparities largely determined by access to land capital and credit ikuko okamoto explores these issues through a detailed case study of thongwa township a place east of yangon rangoon in the major green gram producing region in the country she shows that farmers responded quickly to policy changes and made maximum use of new opportunities even in a country where socialist policies had previously limited such opportunities she also traces the consequences for different social groups in rural myanmar and shows that traders benefited the most from the new arrangements and landless laborers the least her research offers important insights into the transition from a socialist to a market based economy and local level responses to market incentives it also shows that the success or failure of new crops in a peasant economy largely depends on whether the crop is compatible with the initial resource endowment
